Camden Haven High School has received more than $10,000 in funding for well-being excursions and another $10,000 to cover NAIDOC Week expenses.

The Kendall Community Op Shop provided the grant as part of more than \$234,090 in funding awarded to sporting and activity clubs, groups and charity causes.

The school is currently running a electronic-learning program for students due to coronavirus guidelines for NSW.

CHHS well-being head teacher Robert Schouten said the school is thankful for all community support in this challenging time.

"The Kendall Op Shop and Camden Haven High School share a wonderful partnership in supporting our community and especially those from disadvantaged backgrounds," Mr Schouten said.

"Our community is very diverse and there are many families who experience significant hardship. The current COVID-19 situation has only made this more challenging.

"We are very grateful to Kendall Op Shop who have offered the school financial support to assist these students to improve their access and inclusion and so that they can enjoy school and participate like everyone else."
